

THE SOCIAL WORLD.

How People Have Managed to Exist
During the Week and What Society Did.

ONLY ONE WEDDING.

The Dancing Clubs Have Their Usual Dances—A Charitable Entertainment Crush, and Other Entertainments.

There is a good deal of ingenuity in a society girl. She would not be so charming at the close of the season, when her nerves are aching and her brain is over tired, as when she found it impossible to sit out a dance at the first ball. The Helena girl is not so over worked, or rather, over danced as most society butterflies. The social season is languid; none of the rush and excitement generally seen in the early autumn, but an apathy surprising when you think of the number of people "in society," who attend the entertainments, but not with great apparent enjoyment. There have occurred only two or three events this week, among the exclusive set of Helena's "four hundred," or forty more or less. The Helena girl shows her ingenuity or it may be better called aptitude. She can throw herself into the breach and assist in anything—tableaux, songs or recitations—for sweet charity's sake. Her heart is large, it sighs pitifully for the homeless and friendless, the working women and their home, and this with as much spirit as she displays in dancing the tango. For, as I said before, the interest seems to flag in the matter of entertaining. Most people are willing, often only too willing to be entertained. But these young social stars seem to hesitate when the question comes up of being the entertainer.

Well, after all, it is undoubtedly good for our girl's health to sit cozily at home for an evening or more of the week, occupied in reading. In this connection the following true story is current. A bright looking, attractive young woman was asked if she had looked through the Cryptogram, or didn't she care for anything of the kind? "Cryptogram?" said she, wrinkling her brow. Then, brightening, "Oh, yes, indeed, I love 'em." Did she think it was a new kind of gum? And this was a Helena girl, but not a good specimen it is to be hoped.

WEDDING CUSTOMS.

A young lady, who is to be married before spring is merged into summer, sends a request to be answered in this column. "At a large wedding I have observed that the bridesmaids should be at least six bridesmaids. Please tell me if I can dispense with two without giving the affair an outre appearance?" Every one has bridesmaids, do they not? Consequently a departure from the custom would only be original and not outre. A pretty wedding generally introduces four bridesmaids as the fashionable number, there may be more, but if you have any, not less. A pretty custom, observed in some parts of the United States, is to have a beautiful child, bearing quantities of flowers and wearing airy white draperies, precede the bride party. Don't follow the beaten track in arranging a wedding. Branch out in an original idea, well carried out, and your wedding will gain plenty of attention.

DINNER AT MR. BULLARD'S.

MINTYRE-GOODWIN.

A quiet marriage, that of Francis N. McIntyre, a well-known attorney of this city, and Miss Claudia Goodwin, of Prickly Pear valley, occurred at St. Peter's Episcopal church Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock. There were present a large number of invited friends of the young couple, prominent attorneys and their families and many society people. The bride party comprised, beside the bride and groom, Mrs. Goodwin, the mother of the bride, Col. William E. McIntyre, the grandfather, Miss Ella Goodwin, sister of the bride, who was bridesmaid, and Sidney McIntyre, groom's brother, best man. Col. Ewing gave away the bride. The Episcopal service was pronounced by Rev. F. F. Webb, rector of the church.

The ceremony concluded, the young people drove to the residence of Mr. A. J. Craven, where an informal reception was held. The bride's costume was of white China silk, trimmed with pearls, a long tulle veil and she carried a large bouquet composed of white roses and smilax.

They took the train for various points of interest in New York and the east. The INDEPENDENT tenders congratulations, among those of a host of friends.

CRESCENT CLUB DANCE.

The very merriest dance of the season was that of the Crescent club, on Thursday evening at the Casino. The members are well acquainted and a stranger is immediately taken into the circle and made to feel cordially welcomed. It is universally pronounced to be the most social club of the city. A number of new dances were given, the members, or some of them, meeting during the interval of club meetings at different residences to practice intricate figures. A vote was taken to continue the meetings and a masquerade ball will probably be given before the season is over. H. B. Lyman was most successful in directing the dances.

There were present Messrs. and Mesdames J. Scarff, Z. T. Burton, C. G. Evans, W. W. Brown, Ed. L. Flaherty, J. J. Hinton, John Worth, Featherly, Sanberg, Bryan, Leslie Sulgrove, William Hartwig, Louis Stadler, J. Switzer, L. N. Smith, Ben Folke, George J. Ringwald, Mrs. N. Bretz, Mrs. Fred Heinlein, Mrs. Joe N. MARRIED IN THE EAST.

Word has been received in Helena that E. F. Welsh, for many years connected with the Western Union office here, was married at New Brunswick, N. J., last Tuesday to Miss Mary A. New, of that city. His old friends in the office who had been apprised of the fact, united in sending the couple an elegant piece of silverware. Mr. Welsh is among the young men who took advantage of the opportunities for good investments in Helena real estate and profited thereby. Being noted for his good judgment, his friends are sure he has made a good selection for a life companion, and all join in hearty congratulations to the young couple.

A GENTLEMEN'S DINNER.

Mr. F. R. Wallace gave a pleasant dinner party at his residence on Wednesday evening to a number of gentlemen. The evening was marked by a spirit of congeniality which is always evoked by the unfortunate ones debared from the festivity.

The Elite club, members of Prof. Beggs' dancing class, held another dance on Thursday evening in Granite hall. A good time was had and everybody danced to the very last note of music.

REALISM ON THE STAGE.

The Border Drama Acted in New York With Rare Spirit.

New York Sun: There are many stage legends of actors who so merge themselves in the part they are assuming that they play in earnest, and where the "business" is bloodthirsty this absorption of mind on their part is sometimes awkward for the other fellow.

It is told of the elder Booth, for example, that in broadsword passages he would get so frantic that his adversary had to parry in earnest, or he would be hurt. Once, it is said, he chased a Richmond clear off the stage, down the back stairs and into the middle of the street. So Edwin Forrest had a "sure enough" fight one night with a sturdy "super" whom he had criticised for not throwing soul enough into his business; and Maurice Barrymore once had a genuine catch-as-catch-can wrestle with a bumptious professional in the wrestling scene in As You Like It, in which Orlando knocked out two of Charles' teeth and otherwise disabled him, though not exactly as the play directs.

The latest addition to these legends is one that comes to day from Cincinnati. A border play is running at the Standard theatre in that city in which Jack Crawford, the scout, and Running Deer, an Indian chief, have a terrific encounter with bowie knives.

Last night Running Deer was drunk and ugly, and instead of yielding to the paleface at the proper moment he kept on fighting with the open intention to capture the paleface's scalp and carve his heart out. Mr. Crawford objected, not so much from personal considerations possibly as because such a change in the plot would disarrange the plot, and hence he defended himself with prowess and agility, sticking the Indian occasionally to remind him to read his lines more correctly.

We are happy to say that after an unusually graphic fight the paleface won as the text required.

THAT SECRET ORDER.

Certain Instructions to the Commander of the Rush to be Investigated.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—A Washington special to the Post says: The investigation before the house committee on marine and fisheries relative to the orders given the commander of the United States revenue marine cutter Rush last summer, are pretty certain to result in a revival of the agitation as to jurisdiction over Behring sea. It appears the captain of the Rush stated before the committee he had received a secret order from the treasury department relative to the seizure of British or other vessels in these waters, the nature of which he did not care to communicate, and referred the committee to the treasury department for the information. The committee called upon the treasury department, but has not yet obtained a reply. From other sources it is ascertained the order was, that while the Rush was to continue its original cruise in Alaskan waters, ostensibly for the purpose of preventing illicit capture of seals, no seizure of British or American vessels should be made last season. It is also stated the British minister was privately informed that no seizures would be made. The information was circulated privately also in Canada, with the result that a large number of Canadian sealers made a profitable catch of seals in Behring Sea last season. It is also said that even a larger number of Canadian vessels will float out the coming season for a like expedition. The suggestion has been made that the government did not desire to have any side issue raised pending the negotiations connected with the fishery treaty, and this secret order to the commander of the Rush was part of the policy by which it was hoped to avoid unnecessary trouble. The treasury department has called upon the commander of the Rush for the return to that department of this order and the captain has returned it. It is said prominent republicans in congress in the two houses are, however, in possession of information as to the exact nature of this order, if they have not a copy of it, and that the action of the treasury department will be made the basis of a searching inquiry in both houses.
